Gentlemen: I am interested in Greek and Roman coins and would like to make a small collection
for a college.Could you suggest reliable markets
where coins can be had at reasonable prices ?
Can you suggest concerns that sell replicas of these ancient articles ?

I am also interested in procuring your museum catalog covering this field. B.H.N.

Dear Sir:

Responding to your postal card inquiry we do not issue a catalogue and I regret that I am unable to give you any very considerable aid in forming a small collection of ancient coins. There are only one or two dealers in this country who would be in a position to aid and I should suggest you write to Mr. Wayte Raymond, 465 Park Avenue, New York City, giving him information as to the amount of money you have to spend and what you wish to obtain with it. It is very difficult to get electro-types of ancient coins; formerly these were made by the British Museum but they are practically unobtainable at a reasonable figure at the present time. Should you come to New York at some future time I should be very glad to talk with you about your collection - I believe I could help you to better advantage by showing you some of our coins and explaining the difficulties of doing what you propose.

Very truly yours,

SN:JG
